

PRAIRIE GROUSE HUNTING TRIP PLANNER

Featuring the Nebraska Sandhills

Grouse hunt Nebraska, where you will find:

- Great opportunities to harvest both greater prairie-chickens and sharp-tailed grouse
- Thousands of acres open to publicly accessible lands
- Mixed-bag opportunities for dove, waterfowl, pheasant, and quail
- Affordable permits and long seasons

Where to Hunt

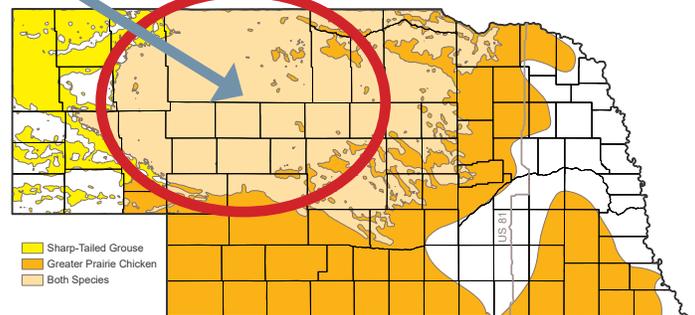

Prairie grouse can be found in many parts of Nebraska. The Sandhills are an endless expanse of native prairie habitat that represent a stronghold for populations of both greater prairie-chickens and sharp-tailed grouse. This, combined with thousands of acres of publicly accessible lands, has placed the Sandhills on bucket lists of upland hunters throughout the country.

Public Lands Hunting Opportunities

Throughout the Sandhills, some of the best public hunting opportunities for prairie grouse will be found on state and federally owned lands, including: Samuel R. McKelvie National Forest, Valentine and Crescent Lake national wildlife refuges, Bessey Ranger District National Forest and Merritt Reservoir Wildlife Management Area.

These five parcels alone provide over 330,000 acres of publicly accessible lands with excellent prairie grouse hunting. All state, federal, and private lands open to public hunting access are displayed in the Nebraska Public Access Atlas. The Atlas is available at NGPC offices, from vendors throughout the state, and online at OutdoorNebraska.org/PublicAccessAtlas.

Other Activities to Enjoy During Your Stay

- Hunt deer in Nebraska with over-the-counter permits, the opportunity to hunt the rut and $8 youth permits for both residents and nonresidents alike. Contact us at 1-800-632-5263 for more information on obtaining a deer permit.
- Nebraska is the best turkey hunting destination in the country. Plan to add a fall turkey hunt to your trip. Fall turkey season coincides with grouse season dates and permits are sold over-the-counter. Hunters may purchase up to two fall turkey permits and youth permits are only $8 for residents and nonresidents.
- Don't leave home without your fishing pole! Fall prairie grouse hunters have the opportunity to enjoy Nebraska's best fishing season, including some of the best bodies of water throughout the Sandhills. Nonresidents may purchase a one- or three-day nonresident fishing license and enjoy a fun side trip from your hunt. Here are a few highlights:
 - Merritt Reservoir SRA – Top muskie fishery in Nebraska.
 - Calamus Reservoir SRA – One of the best walleye, white bass and trophy channel catfish areas in the state.
 - Valentine National Wildlife Refuge lakes – Extensive series of lakes with great year-round fishing for northern pike, largemouth bass and panfish.

Nebraska is an upland bird hunter's paradise – the mixed bag capital of the Great Plains – with diverse upland hunting opportunities, long seasons, great access to public lands, and high hunter satisfaction rates. Learn more about the slam at OutdoorNebraska.org/UplandSlam.
